The Struggle with Time Management: Identifying the Threads

In an ongoing survey conducted by Innovative Management Tools, it is revealed that a significant number of departments face challenges related to time management. A whopping 92.31% of respondents pinpointed time management as a crucial concern within their organizations in three scenarios:

Scenario 1: Collaborators Missing Deadlines

A department has identified collaborators who regularly miss deadlines and expect that the root cause is poor time management skills. A deep dive is needed to resolve the problem.

Scenario 2: Work Overload Complaints

Employees are commenting that they have too much work and not enough hours even though the same position and workload has been or is being performed without issues by others.

Scenario 3: Recognizing Signs of Burnout

The company has noticed that some employees work extra hours, don't take lunch, or take work home, suggesting that the employees might need time management skills coaching.
